Based in the hills of Provence, Jerome Galis is renowned for its cultivation of truffles, asparagus and other vegetables. Using his knowledge of the terroir and the importance of fresh produce from his time as a chef, Jerome experiments using new research and techniques to perfect its harvesting.

The Provence region is the third biggest producer of asparagus in France. With a mild climate and nutrient-rich soil, it is perfect for growing Asparagus.

Provence-Alpes-Côte d'Azur region, France

Based in Herefordshire, Wye Valley Produce began growing Asparagus in 2003 but has since expanded to include rhubarb, blueberries, fine beans and peas.

The light, sandy soil and south-facing slopes of the Wye Valley capture the earliest Spring sunlight and create a microclimate that is perfectly formed to produce some of the earliest, and the best, produce in the UK. It is their attention to freshness and quality, as well as the natural advantage of their location, which makes Wye Valley Produce stand out from the rest.

Beginning in 2009 with two chefs growing micro herbs for the restaurants they worked in, Nurtured in Norfolk has expanded massively, now offering a wide range of 280 products, from edible flowers to micro herbs. As ex-chefs themselves, the co-founders understand the need for quality and consistency in the flavour and appearance of their plant-based garnishes.

All of their products are grown on a natural soil base with minimal pesticides and picked by hand to ensure only the freshest and highest quality produce is chosen.

With over 15 years experience, the Tomato Stall grows a diverse range of high quality and flavourful tomato varieties. Based in the Isle of Wight, the farm has the perfect conditions to grow tomatoes, with plenty of sunlight and rich soil.

The Tomato Stall aims to grow their produce in the most natural and sustainable way possible, using natural predators over pesticides to help them keep balance and control pests in their green houses. They also recycle their tomato plants to create their unique compost that is used to enrich their organic soil.

Eric Roy
MARAICHER

Based in the Indre-et-Loire area of central France, known for its luscious environment, Eric Roy produces the highest quality miniature vegetables. With a commitment to freshness and quality, their produce is selected and harvested by hand according to the wishes of each customer, and then washed and prepared in wooden boxes to retain the humidity. This allows them to preserve all the taste and aesthetic qualities of the vegetables.

As an Organic producer, Eric Roy crushes and reintegrates the foliage that surrounds their fields into the soil to enrich it with nutrients naturally.

Paris, France

Based in the Têt valley of the Pyrénées-Orientales region, Citrus Bachès estate extends for 40km, growing several hundred varieties of tailor-made citrus fruits for chefs. Since 2021, Citrus Bachès has been Organic certified.

The soils of the terroir, irrigated by an ancestral network of canals dug into the mountainside, are adapted to the needs of citrus fruits which need humidity. During the citrus season, from October to March, the dampness of the greenhouse, unheated but essential to protect the fruits from the rigours of winter, also helps creates the optimal tropical atmosphere to help the fruits become fragrant and juicy.
